Gov. Johnson Advised Walkout

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Gov. Paul Johnson said Tuesday he has been advised the regular Mississippi Democrats will walk out of the national convention rather than sign loyalty oaths to be seated.

Explorer Shot Into Orbit

POINT ARGUELLO, Calif. (AP) — A satellite designed to chart the ionosphere, and perhaps find why radios sometimes black out, spun into orbit Tuesday.

The ionosphere is a mysterious layer of electrified particles, starting 50 miles above the earth and ending 200 or 300 miles high. It makes long-range communication possible by reflecting back radio waves.

Barry Urges 'Be Prepared'

Democrats Back Johnson, Shun Mississippi Delegates

Three Mississippi Delegates Take Seats

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The Democratic National Convention Tuesday shouted approval of a requirement that the regular Mississippi delegation pledge support of President Johnson. The delegation had already announced its refusal to do so.

David L. Lawrence, chairman of the Credentials Committee, read the three-part resolution approved earlier in the day by the committee and it was hurriedly adopted by a voice vote.

Resolution

The resolution sets the following conditions on the seating of the regular delegation over the rival claim of the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party, a predominantly Negro delegation:

—The delegates must sign a declaration assuring they will support the convention's nominee for president.

—The 1968 convention rules will include a decree that state Democratic parties assures that all voters have an opportunity to participate fully in party affairs.

—The rival delegation will be "welcomed" to the convention as honored members, and that Aaron Henry, Negro leader, and Rev. Edwin King, white man also a member of the Freedom party, be seated as delegates-at-large.

Freedom Group

The Freedom group also had rejected the resolution earlier. It was drafted as a compromise after days of effort to solve the dispute between the two Mississippi groups.

After the convention ratified the credentials committee's report, however, Henry said his group will meet again Wednesday and consider whether to accept the two delegate-at-large seats.

He said that although his delegation had once voted to reject the compromise, its adoption made it part of the convention proceedings and his group might reconsider.

Although the committee recommendation called for Henry and King to be delegates and the other members to be admitted as guests, they all lacked credentials as the convention reopened Tuesday night and were unable to get in.

A spokesman for the all-white Mississippi delegation announced earlier in the day that the group was withdrawing from the convention.

However, three of the regular Mississippi delegates signed what they said was an "intention to support the party nominees" and took their seats. They made it clear this was not an "oath."

The remainder of Mississippi's seats were empty of delegates.

3 Signers

The three who said they had signed the intention were C.R. Holladay of Picayune, Douglas Wynn of Greenville, and Fred Berger of Natchez.

The earlier announcement that at least the bulk of the regular delegation would withdraw was made by Jack Pittman, secretary of the delegation. He said "we are not going to participate further in the proceedings of the convention."

He said that "the Mississippi Democratic delegation did not leave the party—it left us."

The decision was announced after a caucus that lasted 2 hours and 10 minutes and was the climax to a four-day dispute touched off by the claims of a rival delegation.

The announcement came at almost the exact moment the second session of the convention was getting under way.

Robert F. Kennedy

Kennedy Officially In Race

NEW YORK (AP) — Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy formally entered the race for the U. S. Senate Tuesday as a Democrat from New York, and said President Johnson will campaign for him. The Republican opposition immediately labeled him "the carpetbagger candidate."

Kennedy has had his home in Virginia and his voting residence in Massachusetts.

Keating Comment

This led his potential Republican opponent, Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, to gibe:

"I welcome Robert Kennedy to New York. Indeed, as his senator, I would be glad to furnish him a guide book, road map and other useful literature about the Empire State which any sojourner would find helpful."

Nomination of the 38-year-old political head of the Kennedy clan is considered assured at the Sept. 1 Democratic State Convention, despite pockets of opposition within party ranks. He said he will resign from the Cabinet if nominated.

Kennedy, with the family name an established political drawing card in New York, is generally conceded to be a formidable opponent to Keating, 64, who is seeking his second senatorial term after 18 years in Congress.

Keating has refused to support Sen. Barry Goldwater as the GOP candidate for president.

Demos Not Worried By Voter 'Backlash'

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) —Democratic leaders for the most part profess not to be worried by a possible white voter "backlash" in the November election.

But they are not agreed on how to meet the issue.

Some say they will ignore it, relying on the Democratic platform or on the fact that Republicans also voted for the Civil Rights Act.

Head On

Others say they will meet the issue head on.

Many feel that GOP candidate Barry Goldwater has an even bigger "frontlash" problem—defection of liberal or moderate Republicans.

The Associated Press asked Democratic leaders how the party can combat white backlash—the term applied to possible resentment of white voters over Negro demonstrations and passage of the Civil Rights Act.

"We're not going to deal with it at all," replied Gov. Edmund G. Brown of California. "We are just going to deal with the positive aspects of what the administration has accomplished. The righteousness of our position was shown by the many Republicans voting for the civil rights bill."

Thorough Explanation

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, who guided the civil rights bill to passage in the Senate, said much of the effect of backlash can be offset by a thorough explanation of the bill.

"For instance, it does not affect housing, it does not affect job seniority, and yet it is these areas where the fears arise," Humphrey said.

Another who would attack the issue head on is Sen. John O. Pastore of Rhode Island who paid tribute in his keynote speech Monday night to the Republican Congress members who voted for the Civil Rights Act.

Backlash

Backlash can be overcome, Pastore said, "merely by showing the morality involved in civil rights. This is a nonpartisan responsibility and we've got to meet it head on."

Gov. Carl Sanders of Georgia a staunch Southern supporter of President Johnson, said he believes the Democratic platform plank on civil righs "will do more to eliminate the white backlash all over the country than any other thing."

He said the pledge to enforce the Civil Rights Act through the local community is "what a majority of the people of this country wanted to hear." He said it "contrasts sharply with the hard-line federal government implementation by force in the Republican platform."

But Virginia's Gov. Albertis S. Harrison said he thinks racial disturbances will be the major issue in his state and much of the South.

"People are getting fed up with the sit-ins, wade-ins, kneelins and what have you," Harrison said. "I think unless the situation abates it will be very harmful for Democratic chances."

Cleo Heads For Florida

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Killer hurricane Cleo veered straight for Floriday Tuesday night after lashing Cuba and leaving a reported 50 or more dead in Haiti.

A radio report reaching Port Au Prince, Haiti, from a businessman in Les Cayes on Haiti's southern peninsula said 50 bodies had been found and a hospital destroyed. Another report from the Dutch freighter Parthenon said 60 per cent of Les Cayes was destroyed and two tugs were sunk.

Cleo started its deadly rampage when it hit Guadaloupe Saturday, killing at least 14 and injuring 100 others.

The storm made an abrupt turn to the north after churning westward in the Caribbean with winds of 140 miles an hour.

The Weather Bureau cautioned residents of south Florida and the Keys to keep in touch with all storm bulletins Wednesday. Small craft were told to stay in port.

Homeowners Warned

Homeowners were warned to be ready for quick action "should a more rapid forward speed take place Tuesday night or very rapid intensification take place over the Florida Straits Wednesday."

Pan Am Strike End In Sight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators for the AFL-CIO Transport Workers Union have "accepted in principle" the terms of a contract proposed by Pan American World Airways, a union official said Tuesday night.

Official acceptance of the company's offer would halt the strike which began shortly after midnight Monday.

The union official, who asked that his name not be used, said the national mediation board and Pan-Am officials were being notified of the union negotiators' decision.

He said, however, that pickets would remain out until the negotiating committee has accepted the language of the proposal.

Tocks Recreation Area Boosted By Demos Platform

By Robert S. Van Fleet
Chief, Ottaway News Service

ATLANTIC CITY —The platform presented last night at the Democratic National Convention gives additional evidence that Democrats are eager to pursue such projects as the Tocks Island National Recreation Area (TINRA).

The platform skirts mention of specific future projects but lists some of those already approved and gives a promise of a "quickened pace" in approval of others.

The premisis of the platform tend to buttress a forecast made last week by Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall, that TINRA would be approved in 1965.

Rep. Fred B. Rooney was not due to arrive at the convention until last night and was not reached for comment. But a spokesman at his office in the Pennsylvania headquarters hotel in Atlantic City concurred in the view that the legislative climate is favorable for early TINRA action.

Hails Land Bill

In a section called, "An Accounting of Stewardship, 1961-64," the platform committee hailed the passage of 1964's Land and Water Conservation Bill and the Wilderness Bill "which together did more to help to conserve outdoor America than any legislation passed in a generation."

In addition, Udall issued a statement at the convention saying the platform "gives a new lease on life to America's natural resources."

Udall said the platform contains 13 pledges for the future of natural resources, and he said, "The challange of developing our river basins leads the list — recognizing not only the great and growing need for supplies of fresh water, but also the recreational value of river basins."

"Non-Commital"

He said the Democratic program is "in sharp contrast to the non - committal Goldwater platform" adopted by Republicans six weeks ago in San Francisco.

The platform promised to:

1. "Continue the quickened pace of comprehensive development of river basins in every section of the country, employing multi - purpose projects such as flood control, irrigation and reclamation, power generation, navigation, municipal water supply, fish and wildlife enhancement and recreation were appropriate to realize the fullest possible benefits."

2. "Provide the people of this nation a balanced outdoor recreation program to add to their health and well-being, including the addition or improved management of national parks, forests, lake shores, seashores, and recreation areas."

One Pennsylvania spolesman, close to affairs in Washington, said he was confident of action next year on TINRA. He lamented that action was not taken this year following passage of the Land and Conservation Bill at the same time Congress approved Fire Island and other projects.

It was his opinion that approval for TINRA could have been won if the Corps of Army Engineers had been ready with the detailed information needed by Congress.

Other Developments

There were these other developments including Pennsylvanians at the convention:

1. The delegation has apparently decided to remain silent on the question of reapportionment of state legislatures. Some states, because the platform omits the subject, have adopted resolutions backing the Supreme Court decision and opposing efforts to overturn it.

2. Former governor David L. Lawrence, chairman of the convention's creditionals committee, convened his committee again Tuesday afternoon and came up with a verdict in the case of the contested Mississippi delegation.

3. Pennsylvania's delegates continued to be inundated with ticket requests from constituents who live nearby and who drive to the convention city seeking admission to the crowded hall.

Soviet Claims Congo Intervention

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union accused the United States and Belgium Tuesday of armed intervention in the Congo and issued a veiled threat to help the Congolese rebels. It said any military occupation by Western nations of the Congo "would create another hotbed of war in the center of Africa."

Tass, the government news agency, said the Communist-backed rebels "have real friends in Africa and not only in Africa who will be able to render them necessary assistance."

The true goals of armed interference in the Congo's affairs, Tass said, are:

"To supress the national liberation movement of the Congolese people, prop up with American bayonets the shaky positions of the imperialist monopolies which are robbing the natural wealth of this country."

"The United States and its NATO partners long since have conducted joint preparations for armed intervention in the affairs of the Congo," Tass said.

Peacemakers Cut To Nip Floor Fight

ATLANTIC CITY (AP) — Democratic convention peacemakers Tuesday put together a Mississippi compromise—rejected in turn by rival delegations—designed to promote unity and prevent a floor fight centering around a racial issue.

The regular all-white Mississippi delegation denounced a proposal that its members take a loyalty oath and announced it was withdrawing from the convention.

MFDP

The predominantly Negro Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party unanimously turned down a proposition which would have given two of its members seats in the convention with full-delegate status.

MFDP members and supporters staged a giant rally outside Convention Hall and leader Aaron Henry declared:

"We are not giving up. We are going in."

They headed for the doors of the hall and tried. The doors were locked in their faces—and those of some late-arriving delegates. But people with credentials soon were getting through—apparently some representatives of the MFDP among them.

3 Take Seats

The Mississippi seats were nearly empty when the convention session began. But three of the regular delegates took seats. They said they had signed a statement of "intention to support the party nominees."

The Mississippi delegation wasn't the only trouble spot.

Rebellious Alabamians

Rebellious Alabamians came back to Convention Hall, under orders from their governor, George C. Wallace, back home, to take over the seats the convention had ruled they couldn't have without taking a loyalty pledge. They were under instructions from Wallace to try the same tactic at every convention session.

Nobody challenged them immediately.

This was a shift in plans among delegates who showed up Monday night, were told to leave because they had balked at signing a party loyalty oath, and stayed anyway. They had talked earlier of packing up and going home, possibly with some Mississippians.

The second session of the convention was given over to a feature speech by John W. McCormack, permanent chairman of the convention and speaker of the House, and to adoption of a party platform.

The platform had to be read to the convention in its entirety — in its thousands of words carefully cut to fit the wishes of Johnson.

Boyer Praises Plank

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (AP) —Harry Boyer, president of the Pennsylvania AFL-CIO and a delegate to the Democratic National Convention Tuesday praised a platform plank calling for repeal of state right-to-work laws.

"This is a step in the right direction," said the leader of the million-member organization.

The plank, Boyer said, would put the Democratic party also on record in support of legislation to repeal a section of the Taft-Hartley Law which opens the way for right-to-work statues at the state level.

"Inasmuch as labor is really interstate in character it is essential that the federal rights to collective bargaining be not adversely affected by permissive state action as is now the case," Boyer said.

His statewide organization recently increased dues assessments from four to seven cents a member to raise $200,000 yearly for a defense fund to combat right-to-work laws and other legislation considered restrictive to labor.

Boyer was interviewed in the lobby of the Hotel Dennis, the Pennsylvania delegation headquarters.

Khanh Steps Down To Form New Government In Viet

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Maj. Gen. Nguyen Khanh struggled as a caretaker Wednesday to mold a new government that would satisfy the riotous student and Buddhist critics of the trappings of dictatorship he has renounced.

Savage Fighting

Savage fighting in Da Nang accompanied the Saigon political developments. A mob of predominantly Buddhist rioters sacked and burned a nearby Roman Catholic settlement of 3,000, then surged through the city's streets, burning a movie theater, shops and other buildings.

Heavy gunfire was heard from the U.S. enlisted men's barracks near the ocean front, but there was no definite word of the reason.

Under pressure by a Saigon mob of 30,000, Khanh resigned Tuesday from the presidency to which he was elected Aug. 16 by his military revolutionary council.

He pledged a new deal for this Communist-menaced republic and junked the controversial constitution promulgated when he moved up from the premiership, which he had held since his coup of Jan. 30.

The 37-year-old strong man and the council — a junta made up of 60 officers of South Viet Nam's U.S.-supported armed forces — announced other steps to end the crisis, then went into a night session to elect a new national leader.

They expected to issue a communique on the results about 10 a.m. — 9 p.m. EST Tuesday.

Reliable Source

A usually reliable political source said Khanh would be named premier, with a Cabinet representing a wide spectrum of the political factions that have opposed him.

Conceivably the council could re-elect Khanh as premier or president to lead a revamped regime. Or it might restore the figurehead chief of state he succeeded 10 days ago, Maj. Gen. Duong Van Minh. Highly popular among Buddhists, Minh directed the November revolt in which President Ngo Dinh Diem, a Roman Catholic, was deposed and slain.

Humphrey Knows Feeling Of Overly Anxious Mother

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) —Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota now knows how it feels to be a beautiful young lady with an overly anxious mother.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey

Every time Humphrey comes in from a date it's the same nagging question: "What, he hasn't asked you yet?"

And every time the answer has to be the same: No, President Johnson hasn't even hinted whom he wants as a vice-presidential running mate.

Hour Is Late

The hour is late. Johnson must soon declare his intentions.

This Democratic National Convention will nominate Johnson for president Wednesday night. Then the schedule calls for the vice-presidential nomination to folow immediately.

There have been hints that Johnson will wait until he is chosen officially, then call the shots.

Tight Control

But the President already has demonstrated convincingly his tight control of this convention, and Republicans will certainly accuse him of overplaying that firm hand if he waits until the last moment to spring his great surprise.

Still, it's Johnson's choice, and Johnston's show.

But it eaves Humphrey in a ticklish spot.

A good argument can be made that any senator with a responsible job steps down if he accepts the vice presidency. At least Johnson was making that argument in 1960 until John F. Kennedy changed his mind for him.

Their Man

As recently as a couple of weeks ago, those around Humphrey say, their man was pointing out how much he liked the Senate, and how it might be a mistake if he gave up the demanding job as assistant Democratic leader there for the more leisurely vice-presidency.

And what if Johnson finally chooses another?

"I think," said this person close to Humphrey, "that everyone will say that Hubert has been dumped."

Union Orders 'Stop Picketing'

HAZLETON, Pa. (AP)—W. A. (Tony) Boyle, president of the United Mine Workers, has told a pension protest committee to stop picketing the union's office here.

Boyle, in a telegram to Charles Nedd, the committee chairman, called the committee illegal and said it is harming the union by preventing members from going to work.

Replying to questions from the committee on what provisions affecting pensioners are being incorporated in a contract being negotiated, Boyle said that when the contract is agreed upon he will disclose its terms.

Water Shortage Hits Laurel Run

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP)—About 80 families living in a section of nearby Laurel Run are facing a water shortage, according to a report Tuesday from Laurel Run Mayor Donald Belles.

Residents of the section receive their water from a well-fed springhouse, the mayor stated. By this morning, the water in the springhouse had fallen to only one foot, far below the usual 8-to 10-foot level, he said.

The water shortage can be overcome, Belles said, if residents confine their use of water to cooking, personal hygiene and the like.

Another problem arising from the water shortage, Belles said, is that the water level in two dams maintained for fire protection, has dropped to about seven feet. Normal level in these dams is 12 to 14 feet.

Representatives of the company and the Sugar Refinery Workers, Local 1648, signed a new one-year contract that will run until Sept. 30, 1965.

The guarantee-of-work clause was hailed by both management and the union leaders as the answer to the problem of automation.

2 Pennsylvanians Die In Crash

The Overdoff family of seven was returning home after a California vacation.

Group To Raise $500,000

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A newly-formed group feels sure that it can raise a half million dollars to rebuild the Jacob Graff house where Thomas Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence.

It was in two rented rooms on the second floor of the Graff house that Jefferson composed the declaration in the summer of 1776. A luncheonette now occupies the site.

President Johnson signed a bill last Friday authorizing the Interior Department to acquire the site and make it part of Independence National Historical Park.

The group seeking the money to restore the house is Declaration of Independence House and Library, Inc.

Subsidence Fund Hits New High

HARRISBURG (AP) — The state coal mine subsidence fund now has more than $15.5 million worth of insurance in force on property in areas threatened with mine cave-ins.

Chester Gormley, director of the fund, said Tuesday that as of July 1 the fund has underwriten 1,255 insurance policies on property in threatened areas since the program was inaugurated on Aug. 1, 1962.

The fund was set up with a $1 million appropriation.

The Pennsylvania Story

GOP Vote, Money Goals

By Mason Denison

HARRISBURG —A goal is something to shoot at. And that's what some of the Pennsylvania GOPoliticos might like to do to their national committee.

For quite blandly, the Republican National Committee, without a flicker of eyelash, has handed Pennsylvania a staggering quota for the 1964 election. Stripped of verbage, it reads:

Votes: 2,947,000. Money: $1,200,000.

After recovering from the initial shock, the unity troopers now plugging for Barry Goldwater (they left their Scranton buttons in San Francisco) went into a huddle to see how the assessment could be allocated throughout the state.

And they are allocating the votes, too, right down to the precinct level. In other words, the 2,947,000 record vote quota for the Pennsylvania GOP will channel down to 423 votes for Mr. Committeeman A to deliver and 501 for Mr. Committeeman B.

The national committee lads, Barry's boys all, now that "unity" has been pledged at Hershey, said "this is what we expect" in the following terms: Vote-wise 500,000 more than the Keystone state rang up for Dick Nixon four years ago. Dollar-wise, $300,000 more.

Biggest GO P presidential vote in Pennsylvania was in 1956 when Ike sailed in for re-election with 2,585,252. All you need, is about 400,000 more than that, boys, the national outfit told Chairman Craig Truax and his crew.

Craig muttered something about "rather high" and no one disputed this, but some of the campaigners looked at the record to compare 2,947,000 with past performances — just like the handicappers do in other races.

Here's what they found:

1960 — Nixon, 2,439,956; Kennedy, 2,556,283.

1956 — Eisenhower, 2,585,252; Stevenson, 1,981,769.

1952 — Eisenhower, 2,415,789; Stevenson, 2,146,269.

1948 — Dewey, 1,902,197; Truman, 1,752,426.

1944 — Dewey, 1,835,054; Roosevelt, 1,940,479.

1940 — Willkie, 1,889,848; Roosevelt, 2,171,035.

Well, that's 24 years of handicapping. You can go back to Abe Lincoln, who polled 268,000 in 1860 in the first Republican campaign in terms of today's Republicans, to win over J. C. Breckenridge, Democrat, who got 178,871 Pennsylvania votes.

Of passing interest, Warren G. Harding (Republican) broke the milion-vote line in 1920, by poling 1,218,216 to become the first presidential candidate to get beyond that magic figure in the Keystone State.

The donkey riders didn't make the one-million-hurdle until 1928, when Al Smith came through with 1,067,586, only to be outjumped by Herbert Hoover, who cracked the two-million-mark at 2,055,382. Who'll make it three million?

While the Johnsonites are whooping it up in Atlantic City this week, the Barry people are optimistically talking about a "back-lash" on the civil rights issue to help put their man across.

But what about the civil rights issue in the broad expanse of Pennsylvania countryside, where GOP legislative candidates are chewing their nails. Despite reapportionment efforts, Pennsylvania's legislature remains rural-dominated. Plenty of the GOP candidates are privately worried that Barry is too far to the right, even for up-state Pennsylvania.

Some of the legislative aspirants reportedly are thinking about coat-tailing it with Hugh Scott, the U.S. Senatorial candidate, on the theory that he will generate more steam than Barry.

Ostriches are the world's largest birds. An adult ostrich is almost eight feet tall, weighs about 300 pounds and can run at speeds up to 30 miles an hour.

LV Dairy, Martin Farms To Combine Operations

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Officials of the Lehigh Valley Dairy of Allentown and Martin Century Farms of Lansdale confirmed reports yesterday that they are working toward combining their operations.

The combined operations will be effected by the acquisition of Martin Century by Lehigh Valley Dairy, the two dairies said in a joint statement.

"Only a few technical details remain to be clarified," the statement said. "When that formal agreement is executed, August and Frank Martin, who are now operating the long-time family-owned Martin Century Farms, will continue to be a part of the management of what will become Martin Century Farms Division of the Lehigh Valley Cooperative Farmers."

All of Martin Century's nearly 1,000 employes will be retained, it was stated.

Lehigh Valley Dairy reported record sales of $24.9 million for 1963, an increase of seven per cent over 1962. Shippers received an average of $15,800 during the year.

A Lehigh Valley Dairy official said the Martin Century operations "are of comparable size."

Hardship Credit Available For Surplus Food Families

HARRISBURG (AP) — Pennsylvania has been authorized to apply a "hardship" credit to families participating in the federal-state surplus food distribution program, it was learned on Tuesday.

Approve Amendment

Robert Freiler, director of the Bureau of Surplus Food in the state Porperty and Supplies Department, said the "hardship amendment" was approved recently by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The amendment, effective on Sept. 1, removes from a needy family's available monthly income and liquid assets "those monies expended for emergency or special circumstances.," Frieler said.

Available monthly income and assets determine a family's eligibility for the program.

In a memorandum to county commissioners, who administer the program on the local level, Freiler explained:

"Emergency or special circumstances are considered to exist if: The household's income is reduced because of unusual medical expenses, expenses caused by disasters such as fire or flood and other such unusual circumstances."

The memorandum added that "each case must be considered on its individual merits and it must be supported by adequate proof of expenditures involved."

Families may be certified for the hardship clause for a period of three months, Frieler said, and may be recertified for another three months "providing the emergency or hardship has been reconfirmed. . ."

The hardship clause was one of two steps the state is taking in an attempt to keep as many needy families as possible eligible for the program.

Last May, at the direction of the federal government, eligibility requirements were tightened so that available liquid assets plus monthly income were used to determine eligibility.

Previously, only monthly income was the determining factor.

Howls Of Protest

This provision drew howls of protest from the county commissioners across the commonwealth, who complained that the liquid resources restriction would hurt many aged families.

Freiler said that the Department of Public Welfare was attempting to work up a new requirement scale which would liberalize the asset limitation.

The limitation affects most severely "many of our old timers who put money away for a rainy day," he continued.

State Commerce Check

$1,978 Presented To PM Industries

STROUDSBURG—Pocono Mountains Industries—the official industrial development agent for Monroe County—yesterday received a matching grant of $1,978 from the Pennsylvania Dept. of Commerce to help defray the cost of a recent advertisement in the New York Times.

The money represents the state's share of a $3,850 advertisement that appeared in a special Times supplement promoting the Pocono Mountain area.

In making the presentation, Herbert T. Axeford, of Scranton, area representative for the Dept. of Commerce, said, "This agency is very active. Our department classes them very high."

Axeford gave the check to J. L. Cohen, president of the Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce—parent organization of PMI.

R. M. Hoot, executive secretary of the chamber, said the special supplement is still being distributed by the Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau.

Hoot said 87 requests for information from businesses have resulted from the advertisement.

Easton Mayor Says Rooney Insurance 'Above Board'

EASTON — Mayor George Smith of Easton last night vigorously denied charges that a conflict of interest case arose when the city of Easton awarded a three-year insurance contract to U.S. Rep. Fred B. Rooney.

The charges were leveled by Leo McCormick, Rooney's Republican opponent for Congress, and are contained in a cartoon being distributed by Mrs. Nancy Shukaitis, secretary of the Monroe County GOP committee.

The caroon shows a caricature of Rooney holding his congressman's salary in one hand and profits from insurance transactions in the other. It is captioned: "What's so conflicting about making money."

The test of the cartoon says the City of Easton, on March 3, 1964, awarded Rooney's Bethlehem insurance firm a three-year contract that will result in Rooney collecting minimum premiums of $47,056 and a maximum of $74,844.

Mayor Smith, a Democrat, said the deal between Rooney and the city council was "absolutely above board."

"There were a half dozen people who submitted prices. He (Roomey) was the lowest. We had experts in here to analyze the bids. His price was so much better, that if we didn't give it to him we could have been in trouble," Mayor Smith maintained.

He said the city gives most of its insurance to Kressler, Wolf and Miller of Easton . . . "who are outstanding Republicans."

In a blunt statement the cartoon says, "Mr. Rooney says 're-elect me,' if you do I can gain status in the Congress. Well, if he 'grabs' us the Easton city insurance business after only a few short months in the Congress, what do you suppose he will 'grab' if you give him a few years? You answer this!"

In another cartoon, a major weapon in McCormick's bid thus far to unseat Rooney, the incumbent is ridiculed for sitting quietly by while the Tennessee Valley Authority bought steel from European sources. It says:

"Don't forget, Mr. Rooney pretends to be the steel workers' friend. Do you believe this tripe? Vote McCormick — a labor man who knows something about the laborers' problems, and get rid of insurance man Rooney."

Along with the package is a note purportedly signed by the president of a United Mine Workers of American Local, showing McCormick was a member of the union from 1914 to 1918.

Burnley Workshop Gets Depot Contract

TOBYHANNA—The Tobyhanna Army Depot has made a second contract with the Burnley Sheltered Workshop for the Handicapped for applying epoxy resin to an electronic part.

The first contract was awarded to the workshop last month, and was an order for about 300 of the resin applications.

The second contract, according to John T. Orrson, small business and labor surplus advisor at Tobyhanna, is for about 5,000 of the applications—a contract worth $2,150.

The contract was given to the workshop as the lowest bidder on the resin project. It was put out on bids by the Purchasing and Contracting Division of the depot, whose chief is James L. Bird.

"Though it's not a large contract, every little bit helps," Orrson said. "The workshop did an excellent job on the first contract, and we are pleased to have them on the second."

Bids were solicited from four firms: Allied Industries, Good-Will Industries, Modern Machine Shop, Inc., and the Burnley Workshop. Only Burnley, Allied Industries, and Modern Machine Shop submitted bids.

Orrson said that he was pleased Burnley had received the contract. "This is most important to us at Tobyhanna—the work is going into a local area."

He said that his office's primary interest was in developing local sources to render services needed by the depot.

'Hot Line' Anniversary

So far as can be determined, the only U. S.-transmitted message to go over the diplomatic "hot line" between Moscow and Washington in the past 12 months has read: "The quick brown fox jumped over the lazy dog's back 123456-7890." The emergency telecommunication link was opened one year ago Sunday, Aug. 30 as a means of reducing the risk of accidental war. Established White House policy is not to tell anything about its use or non-use.

When opened, it was said that the "hot line" was to be used only "in time of emergency" and then only for exchange of messages between the President of the United States and the Premier of the Soviet Union. So far as known, no U.S.-Soviet crisis has arisen to require its use during the first year.

Need for such an emergency system of communication became evident during the Cuban missile crisis of October 1962. The two nuclear powers experienced serious delay in getting messages back and forth. Normal commercial channels between the U. S. and Soviet embassies in Moscow and Washington proved wanting because of coding requirements. It became necessary to rely upon broadcasts of messages to save time. Less than six months later, at the Geneva Disarmament Cononference, an accord was reached setting up the special link.

The 24-hour "hot line" starts at the National Military Command Center in the Pentagon and terminates in the Kremlin near the office of Premier Khrushchev. To Republican platform writers, the arrangement is too cozy. The 1964 GOP platform charges that the Democratic administration has "alienated proven allies by opening a 'hot line' first with a sworn enemy rather than with a proven friend, and in general pursued a risky path such as began at Munich a quarter century ago." On the other hand, as President Kennedy once pointed out in discussing the emergency link, "In a nuclear age, speed is very desirable."

'Only 19' Campaign

You haven't yet heard of the "Only 19" campaign. But you will.

It's to be conducted in October. And the purpose is to show the American people that food is a bargain. The main point to be emphasized is that the average American family today spends only 19 cents of its after-tax dollar for food, as compared with 26 cents just 15 years ago. This simply means that, while food prices have naturally risen, incomes have risen substantially more. And the percentage-of-income that we must pay for anything is the best measurement of value received.

All types of food retailers—chains, independents, cooperatives — are invited to participate in telling the industry's impressive story. A game—called "Only 19" — has been created for the campaign, and winners will be given handsome prizes. All in all, the pending campaign is described as the "greatest united industry effort in history."

Commercial considerations aside, this is a matter of gaining credit where it is due. The whole food industry, in this age of inflation, has done a far better job than we generally realize in making the consumer dollar go as far as possible.

Off The Record:

—By BOB CLARK

Press Must Do Better

(Last of two articles on how the nation's top wire services will treat the coming election campaigns. Today's is by Wes Gallagher, general manager of the Associated Press. It is in the form of a letter to AP members. The Daily Record subscribes to the AP and to the thinking of Gallagher).

"It has become increasingly apparent that the press is under heavy attack in many sections of the country for a variety of reasons. There is also considerable latent hostility toward newspaper, radio, television and magazines on the part of the general public.

"The reasons for this are diverse and will vary from community to community. Perhaps the basic one is that the reader or the listener confronted with a story which annoys him, or with which he finds himself in complete disagreement, or which is unpleasant and disturbs his day, is apt to blame the medium that carried it to him rather than the facts of the story itself.

"This is not new. In the pre-war years, for example, we frequently were criticized for having correspondents in Berlin and Moscow and reporting the views of Adolf Hitler and Joseph Stalin.

"Today this criticism of the press is more widespread because the issues reported are closer to home and arouse far deeper feelings.

"A few examples: the social revolution of segregation and integration which has churned up emotional responses as violent as any in U.S. history, the frustrations of the war in Viet Nam where people are dying in what seems an endless struggle, the equally frustrating and seemingly endless negotiations with Russia on scores of different issues, and the widening political chasm between Republicans and Democrats which will result in a highly heated presidential campaign between President Johnson and Senator Goldwater.

All of these issues bring out deep and primitive feelings across the country. It is not surprising that part of these feelings is directed at the press which reports on controversial matters. The recent prolonged applause for General Eisenhower's statement against columnists and commentators was just a symptom of this feeling.

"It is unlikely that this climate will change in the near future. The underlying social, diplomatic and cause passionate responses will continue. And there are groups which feel it is in their own self interests to make sure that the attacks upon the press continue.

"The Associated Press cannot expect itself to be immune from attacks. We report controversial news from every corner of the world 24 hours a day, and there will always be something in the report that will stir some group's anger.

"It would be foolish, too, to contend that we don't make our mistakes. You can't handle three million words of contemporary history daily from every part of the world without blowing stories now and then. This is not particularly surprising when learned historians still argue as to exactly what went on in World War I, let alone World War II.

"The Associated Press' position in reporting all of these controversial areas must be that of professional journalists reporting as precisely and objectively as we can on the controversial news of the day. Our greatest strength and protection against critics is to perform as competent, non-partisan journalists. The backbones of our profession are precise reporting and balanced editing, and the key word is "precise."

"Political campaigns are awash with vague statements which can be read two or three ways. The politician hopes that each of his constituents will read into such statements his own views and be satisfied and unquestioning. We should try to clarify such statements at every opportunity with specific questions. But we should not try to interpret them on our own without such clarification, nor should we try to paraphrase them.

"Let us report exactly what was said or what the facts are. If they are not clear, let us say so and pursue the matter again at the first opportunity.

"Let us not accept one candidate's second-hand quotation of another without checking that it is accurate and not out of context. We have been caught on at least one occasion recently by accepting a candidate's statement which he attributed to a rival. In political debates or speeches, accuracy is not the key objective of the participants — but it is ours.

"If a controversial claim is made, let us immediately pursue comment from the opposing side. If it is not immediately forthcoming, let us say so in order that readers are informed of the reaction or the lack of it.

"We should not be deterred by the critics from doing our job. We have nothing to fear from them nor from the political partisans and organized pressure groups if we do our jobs in the tradition of this organization.

"This does not mean that we are going to be free from attack. Considering the issues and emotions of the day, this would be impossible. But we can avoid giving these critics any legitimate issues or excuses whereby they can challenge either our competence or our integrity.

"We should view this era, not as one of harassment or difficulty, but as a challenge to bring forth our best journalistic talents. The more emotional the time, the greater need there is for unemotional, objective reporting.

"By providing this, we can take personal satisfaction in making a worthwhile contribution to society in a difficult period."

Nerve-Racking Trip

By George Dixon

WASHINGTON — Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, Senate Majority whip Hubert H. Humphrey and Chairman Warren G. Magnuson of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee made a strange and nerve-racking pilgrimage the other day. They journeyed through darkest uncertainty from the Senate to the House side of the Capitol to ask Speaker John W. McCormack when Congress might adjourn.

Speaker McCormack said he didn't know either. The four Congressional leaders resorted to almost everything except incantations and divination by the entrails of a lame duck, but no answer came.

Inasmuch as "When in blazes are they ever going to let us get away?" is the Great Question on Capitol Hill, the terrible quandary of the quartet may be imagined. Striving to put a brave face on it, but with voices almost devoid of hope, they told each other there must be some omen to give an inkling when adjournment is nigh.

Senators Mansfield, Humphrey, and Magnuson said they had hoped to get all the legislative business cleaned up by the end of this week so Congress wouldn't have to come back after the Democratic National Convention in Atlantic City. Speaker McCormack murmured mysteriously that he hadn't been able to share their hope.

He would not elaborate.

Majority Leader Mansfield returned to the Senate to announce the glum tidings that the Senate would have to be back at work on Aug. 31 and remain on the job until the deadlock on reapportionment of State legislatures had been broken and the Medicare Bill brought to a final vote.

Senators Humphrey and Magnuson remained behind with Speaker McCormack for a few minutes. They asked the Speaker if some occult visitation had told him that adjournment was not imminent.

The Speaker just looked mysteriously at the ceiling.

Humphrey and Magnuson were about to make their baffled departure when they got the high sign from one of Mr. McCormack's principal aides. The aide followed them to the corridor and there told them in ghostly undertones:

"There is an infallible harbinger which tells when Congress is about to adjourn. But this blessed precursor has not manifested itself yet."

"What is this harbinger?" palpitated the solons.

"Mrs. McCormack's hat box!" whispered the aide.

The august Senators reacted as if they'd just had word from Dracula.

"What about Mrs. McCormack's hat box?" they breathed.

"Whenever Congress is getting ready to adjourn," confided the Speaker's aide, "Mrs. McCormack commissions one of us to go out and buy her a new hat box. She is a lady of many hats, some of them sizeable, and she buys a new hat box every year to take them home. But she hasn't asked for one yet."

"And," gasped the solons, "you take that as a certain portent?"

"It has never failed yet. When Mrs. McCormack asks for a new hat box we all leap with joy, and cry, 'Boys, we're going home!' "

"But what about the legislative calendar? — What about bills that are still to be brought up?"

"We say, 'To hell with the calendar, and what's coming up!' We go by Mrs. McCormack's hat box!"

Although the Senate has been ordered to be back here on Aug. 31, this probably will not go for the House. The rumor is all over the Capitol that Speaker McCormack won't bring the House back until Sept. 14.

The dismaying prospect of being kept here indefinitely in an election year has reduced the bonhommie content of many of the lawmakers. Even one as amiable as Senator Stuart Symington of Missouri flared up the other day.

After long and footless debate with Senator Carl T. Curtis of Nebraska, Mr. Symington left the Senate chamber to cool off. A Democratic colleague with a large needle asked:

"How'd you like to get away from here and go fishing with Curtis?"

"Not unless I can swim!" snapped Symington.

Behind Dirksen's Play

By Roscoe Drummond

WASHINGTON — The opponents of equal representation of voters in state legislatures may think they can easily block this long-delayed reform. They're wrong.

The politicians are acting with unseemly haste to preserve their own political hides and those of their friends.

The real purpose behind the maneuver of Everett Dirksen, the Senate Republican leader, is not simply to give the states more time to end the nationwide minority rule of the state legislatures. The primary purpose is to slow down re-apportionment so that minority rule can be perpetuated by a Constitutional amendment before the public realizes what's up.

The voters are brighter and quicker than the politicians think.

There is no evidence that the Supreme Court ruling requiring legislative re-apportionment has caused any substantial public resistance. It has only caused a politicians' resistance because the politicians who benefit from egregiously minority districts do not relish losing their seats. The proposition that all citizens should have an equal vote in electing the legislatures does not seem horrendous to most voters.

There is evidence that the voters are quickly grasping what the Supreme Court is doing in their behalf. The first Gallup Poll since the court decisions shows that there is strong majority support (3 to 2) for such re-apportionment.

Fortunately, the hurry-up supporters of an amendment to void the Supreme Court's action will not find the amending process a hurry-up device to alter the Constitution. It will require a two-thirds vote by the Senate and the House and ratification by the legislatures of 38 states. Since both houses in each state must approve to put a state behind ratification and since there are 99 state legislative house (Nebraska having a unicameral legislature) the opposition of one legislative house in 13 states would defeat the amendment.

It is quite true that the amendment which Sen. Dirksen plans to introduce next year and which the 1964 Republican platform advocates would not automatically require the states to perpetuate the over-representation of rural voters. It would be permissive.

That sounds nice and innocent; almost reasonable. But it isn't innocent and it isn't reasonable. It simply permits the continuously declining rural population — and such rural minorities control at least one house in every state in the Union—to veto any action by the state legislatures to end such minority rule. The "permissiveness" of the Dirksen amendment is permission in name only; it is in reality an instrument for the perpetuation of minority rule which these minorities have maintained for decades against the provisions of their own state constitutions and which they are not going to give up voluntarily.

Realm Of Stamps

Ray Patton

Sept. 11 the five cent Mayo Brothers stamp will have first day sale at Rochester, Minn. The United Nations five and eleven cent values for the "Control of Narcotics" will be released September 21.

The Mayo Brothers stamp will be printed in green, the symbolic color for medicine. The stamp was designed by Matthew D. Fenton and Victor S. McCloskey Jr., which is based on heroic statues of the Doctors Mayo in surgical gowns by James Earl Fraser.

Another symbol of healing, the staff of Aesculapius with entwined snake appears in the lower left of the stamp. The Mayo Brothers were descendents of an English family that included a number of Doctors.

Their father Dr. William W. Mayo, practiced "Kitchen Surgery" in Rochester during and after the Civil War. The boys both watched and later stated they had been reared in medicine as farm boys.

The Monroe Stamp Club will meet Wednesday, September 16 at 8 p.m. Due to the lack of time schedules of all the meetings will be distributed at this meeting. Trading ssesions are held every Wednesday evening during the summer.

Vote On Medicare

Paul Scott

ATLANTIC CITY — Both the Senate and House will definitely vote on the long pending medicare issue before they finally wind up next month.

President Johnson has flatly laid down this edict, and Speaker John McCormack, Mass., and Senate leaders Mike Mansfield, Mont., and Hubert Humphrey, Minn., have given assurances that his explosive demand will be met.

This is the private word to key state and local Democratic leaders attending the convention whose help is being urgently sought to line up their congressional members. Some are agreeing to give a hand, but others are unenthusiastic and making no promises.

The party chiefs are being told the President notified the top congressional leaders of his insistence on a medicare showdown in this highly uncertain election year before they left for the convention.

Three reasons were spelled out by him for this backstage decision:

(1) The President is convinced the Senate can be induced to approve the King-Anderson Bill for a medicare plan as part of the Social Security system. This belief is apparently based on a series of secret polls which reputedly give this long embattled measure a one vote margin. It was turned down decisively last week by the Senate Finance Committee, headed by Senator Harry Byrd, Va.

(2) Similarly the President thinks he can pressure a compromise on the King-Anderson bill through the House. That is why he is concentrating all his efforts to put that measure through the Senate. By doing that the President figures he can dangle the lesser Ribicoff proposal as a compromise in the House. Whether he can pull off this strategy is decidedly conjectural and several of the congressional leaders don't think much of it. But they have no choice and are going along with him.

(3) The strong desire to force Senator Barry Goldwater and Representative William Miller the Republican presidential team, to take a stand on the medicare issue. In the President's discussion with the Democratic leaders he made clear he proposes to make this question a top electioneering argument, and wants his rivals to have a clear-cut record on it.

The issue will be raised in the Senate as an amendment to the pending bill increasing Social Security benefits. This was approved earlier this month by the House, but the chamber's rules blocked a floor battle and vote on medicare.

Senator Albert Gore, Tenn., up for re-election this year, has *agreed to sponsor a King-An*derson plan amendment and to spearhead the fight for it.

Talking And Betting — The President had to do quite a bit of arm twisting (for which he is noted) to persuade the congressional leaders to "buy" his stormy scheme.

Speaker McCormack and Senators Mansfield and Humphrey are emphatically for medicare. They favor the King-Anderson bill, but are willing to accept the Ribicoff measure as an alternative. The doubts voiced centered on the advisability of trying to pressure action on this bitterly controversial issue at a time when Congress is fretfully seeking to quit to devote itself wholly to campaigning.

But the President was adamant. He contended, "This is the best kind of campaigning. There are millions of people getting nightly impatient for medicare, and the best way to win their votes is to do something about it."

"A one-vote margin isn't very much to go on," it was pointed out. "That's pretty thin ice."

"It's better than no ice at all," retorted the President.

"You have confidence in these polls?"

"Enough to decide to make the fight," said the President. "These polls were meticulous and thorough, and I am satisfied they are reliable and accurate as of now. It is possible there may be changes before a vote is reached in the Senate. But if there are, we will know about them before the roll is called."

The President stressed that his strategy hangs on the Senate's approving the King-Anderson Bill so the Ribicoff measure can be used for "trading purposes" in the House.

"How are you going to maneuver that in the Senate," he was asked.

"The polls show we have the votes," he replied. "The important thing is to get the first vote on King-Anderson. Once that is adopted, Ribicoff will be superfluous. There will be no purpose in bringing it up."

"What about Wilbur Mills? He is a key man on this issue in the House. He can swing a lot of votes, and he has given no sign of making any concessions on medicare. He demonstrated that clearly when he threw his weight against doing anything on this question in the Ways and Means Committee."

Mills, from Arkansas, is chairman of this potent committee, and has long opposed any form of medicare under Social Security. He is credited with having Cabinet ambitions.

"I can handle Mills," said the President flatly. "You put King - Anderson through the Senate, and I will take care of Mills in the House. I'll promise you that."

Speaker McCormack expressed doubt that Senator Goldwater would vote on medicare.

"What makes you think he will go on record on that?" said the veteran lawmaker. "Personally, I think he'll duck. It will be relatively easy for him to do so with the campaign underway. He can claim he had a prior engagement."

"I don't think so," replied the President. "I think he will be on hand for these votes. They are too important to run out on."

"I'l bet you $10 you are wrong," said McCormack.

"That's a bet," said the President. "I don't think he will vote for medicare, but he won't duck it. That's why I want a record vote. In that way we'll have him hooked, coming or going. You want to bet on Miller, too?"

"No," laughed McCormack. "I would bet he'd duck if it were solely up to the House. But the Senate gets the first crack, and Miller will do whatever Goldwater does."

One important gain the White House is counting on is Senator Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va. Several years ago his vote defeated the King - Anderson Bill in the Senate. But now he is vigorously supporting the measure.

Dear Abby

Another 'Cold' War

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a wife who keeps asking her husband, age 64, when he is going to retire? The husband is a successful businessman who enjoys being in business, is in good health, and never thinks about retiring until his wife brings it up.

Also, what would you think if this wife took out TWO additional policies on her husband's life while she was his bookkeeper and was authorized to sign his checks? (This wasn't discovered by the husband until several years later). This same wife reads every magazine article she can find on things a widow should know. She claims she is only being "realistic." I would like your opinion.

SOMEBODY'S HUSBAND

DEAR HUSBAND: Your wife's waging a war of nerve —and winning! Relax, or you'll accommodate her sooner than you both think.

DEAR ABBY: I am mad! I just returned from a friend's house and she slyly accused me of having amorous feelings about my doctor! What's with people? They think the milkman, postman, salesman and repair men are all the secret lovers of every woman who looks at them sideways. Some people can't forget about sex for one minute! Why can't people be motivated by art, music, world peace or something else?

"VIVA LA SENSE"
IN FT. WAYNE

DEAR VIVA: Some people ARE! What's with you?

DEAR ABBY: I enjoyed the letter in your column from a pair of identical twins who said they didn't like to be called "Twin" or "Twinny," and they were disgusted with people who asked, "Are you twins?" That last complaint is so familiar to me because I have an identical twin brother, and when we were young we were dressed alike, and still people would ask, "Are you twins?" My mother told us that when we were about three years old she was walking down the street with one of us on each side of her, when a strange woman stopped us and asked my brother, "Are you brothers?" And he replied, "No ma'am, we're sisters."

Speaking Of Your Health:

Doctor Coleman I'd Like To Know

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

A family discussion recently aroused our curiosity. Why are some medicines taken before meals, others with meals, and others after meals?

Mr. D. L. C., New York

Dear Mr. C.: There are definite reasons for these instructions.

Some medicines may be irritating to the stomach if taken when it is empty. Therefore the instruction, "Take with meals," or immediately after eating, is given.

Other medications may be designed to stimulate the appetite. These, of course, would be most beneficial before meals.

Often there is need for rapid absorption of a drug. Then the prescription usually directs that it be taken between meals, on an empty stomach, for maximum effectiveness.

Regular Intervals

Many prescriptions require that a drug be taken at definite, regular intervals during the day and often throughout the night. The purpose of such directions is to maintain a concentrated level of medication.

Patients in hospitals are sometimes annoyed when they are awakened in the middle of the night to take medicine. But this is not merely the whim of a thoughtless doctor or nurse. The advantages gained during a day of persistent medication may be lost and progress retarded if the strength of the treatment is not maintained during the night.

Pain In Chest

My husband had a pain in the chest and an electrocardiogram was taken immediately. The doctor said it was normal but that my husband should go into the hospital anyway. As it turned out, he did have a heart attack. Why did it not show on the electrocardiogram?

Mrs. R. L. S., Connecticut

Dear Mrs. S.: The clinical judgment of your physician was obviously very astute. For even in the absence of any evidence in the electrocardiogram, he established the life-saving diagnosis of an acute heart attack.

The electrocardiograph records the action of the heart muscle. Frequently a very early electrocardiogram fails to show the changes in the activity of the heart muscle impaired by the heart attack.

A later electrocardiogram — twenty-four to seventy-two hours after the onset of an attack — usually reveals the evidence of heart damage.

Stories Behind Words

by William S. Penfield

Turncoat

A "turncoat" is a person who deserts his faith, principles or party. The word, which is several hundred years old, was derived from a tale about a Duke of Saxony.

The duke's territory was bounded by Spain on one side and by France on the other.

The duke, according to the story had a coat that was blue on one side and white on the other.

When he wanted to appear favorable to the French, he wore the white outside. And when he wanted to appear friendly toward Spain, he turned, or reversed, the coat and wore the blue on the outside.

Skytop Man Receives Patent

STROUDSBURG — Frederic O. Hess of Skytop has received a patent on a new process for pre-heating clay particles. The patent was issued July 28 by the U.S. Patent Office and has been assigned to Selas Corp. of America in Dresher, Pa.

The patent covers a device that pre-heats clay particles to about 1,800 degrees Fahrenheit, before they are dropped a "shaft furnace" for further heating to make the clay desirable for certain uses.

The clay is heated in order to make it swell. Some types of clay must reach a temperature of 2,800 degrees Fahrenheit as it falls through the shaft furnace.

Such clay must be pre-heated before being dropped through the furnace. Hess' new method and apparatus improves the pre-heating of the clay.

The new process is effected by mounting a number of devices at the top of the furnace. Each device is divided by a screen into an upper and lower chamber.

The clay particles drop from a supply source to the outer end of the screen and while moving along the screen are heated to the desired temperature by a burner. The particles then pass through the lower chamber and out through a stack.

The heated particles then fall vertically through a shaft furnace where they are heated to the swelling temperature.

The pre-heating apparatus of Hess' invention is of such construction that each of the clay particles is heated to about the same temperature.

TANNERSVILLE — Cherry Lane Playhouse will close its current season of professional musicals with "South Pacific" by Rodgers and Hammerstein.

Richard Burton's "Hamlet" To Come Here In Fall Direct From Broadway In Electronovision Theatrofilm

Richard Burton in "Hamlet," one of the greatest attractions in the history of the New York stage, will be presented here by Warner Bros. direct from Broadway in the fall at the Sherman Theatre for four performances only, through the revolutionary new electronic-optical Electronovision process of Theatrofilm.

The four performances will take place on two successive days. There will be two matinees and two evening performances, with the exact dates and times to be announced shortly. There will be no other performances thereafter.

Tickets will be sold in advance for the four performances. Seats wil lnot be reserved but the number of tickets to be sold for each performance will not exceed the capacity of the theatre, thereby guaranteeing a seat to each ticket holder. All tickets will be at popular prices, approximately those for first-run motion pictures.

One thousand theatres throughout the United States and Canada will present Burton's once-in-a-lifetime interpretation of "Hamlet" on the same two days.

"Hamlet" concluded its Broadway run at the Lunt-Fantanne Theatre in New York on August 8. Instead of a "road" tour of the play, Burton's "Hamlet" will be brought to audiences from coast to coast in Electronovision Theatrofilm.

The new electronic-optical process makes it possible for audiences everywhere to see an outstanding Broadway production exactly as it is performed on the New York stage. The Electronovision Theatrofilm "Hamlet" combines the dramatic excitement of the stage technique, with the immediacy of television and the big-screen effect of motion pictures.

Starring with Burton in "Hamlet" are Hume Cronyn, Alfred Drake, Eileen Herlie, William Redfield, George Rose and George Voskovec. The production, staged by John Gielgud, has been acclaimed on Broadway by critics and public alike, with many calling Burton the greatest "Hamlet" of all time.

Alexander H. Cohen, who brought Burton's "Hamlet" to Broadway, is serving as executive producer of the Theatrofilm, which is being directed by William Colleran and produced by William Sargent and Alfred W. Crown, the chief officers of Electronovision Productions, Inc., developers of the Electronovision Theatrofilm process. —Adv.

Game Violation Appeal Slated For September Argument List

STROUDSBURG—A game law violation that was appealed to Monroe County Court during May, 1963, and recently drew the fire of the County Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs has been scheduled for the September argument list, President Judge Fred W. Davis said yesterday.

Delay in prosecuting game law violations has been the target of federation complaints for the last two meetings. At its August meeting, the federation voted to send observers to justice of the peace hearings involving game infractions.

The federation sent a letter to Judge Davis urging the jurist to speed up the timetable of a county court case involving the killing of deer out of season.

The case involves Harrison Moyer Sr. and Harrison Moyer Jr., both of Pocono Pines. The pair was arrested by John Spencer, county game protector, and convicted before a justice of the peace. The summary conviction was appealed to county court in May, 1963.

William Rea, club secretary and chairman of the game committee, reported that a federation recommendation calling for a mandatory jail sentence in serious game law cases was approved by the Northeast Division Federation meeting.

The federation has also endorsed a "first come, first served" plan for issuing doe licenses during the 1964 doe season. Doe licenses are issued by the county treasurer. Rea urged all sportsmen to co-operate with the treasurer.

The Pennsylvania Dept. of Highways has informed a survey of deer fences along state highways is underway and construction will be given to erecting such a fence along Rt. 80 when the survey is complete.

The federation has carried on a running complaint about the large number of deer killed by cars on Rt. 80.

The Blue Ridge-Cherry Valley Rod and Gun Club informed the federation it will introduce a resolution at the Sept. 8 meeting calling for free fish licenses for blind people.

John Deibert, chairman of the ways and means committee, said the federation's annual game dinner will be held Oct. 3, at 6:30 in East Stroudsburg.

Martin Motts, club treasurer, reports a $78 bank balance and urged members to sell associate memberships to the federation in order to raise funds.

BANGOR — Shirley Heisey, of 15 S. Main St., Bangor, has had two suits filed against her from the same automobile accident.

The suits were filed in Northampton County Court.

Sally Pursel of Ackermanville and Rita Frutchey of 16 Miller St., Bangor, are the plaintiffs. Both were passengers in the defendant's car, which crashed April 10, 1963, on the Roseto-Bangor Road.

The suits state the car left the highway and hit a tree.

Both plaintiffs, who were 19 at the time, sustained injuries, according to the suit. Miss Pursel's suit, filed by her mother, Grace Pursel, seeks "not in excess of $10,000" for head and back injuries.

Rita Frutchey's suit, filed by her mother, Anna Cole, seeks $169 for medical treatment and $1,500 for pain and suffering.

Edmund P. Turtzo filed the papers in both cases.

Bangor Okays Bus, Lunch Schedules

BANGOR — The Bangor Area School District has announced the bus and cafeteria schedules for the coming school year.

The fifth and sixth grade pupils from the McKinley school area in Bangor have been assigned to the Washington Township school.

A bus will pick up these pupils at the McKinley building and Long's Alley at approximately 8:10 a.m. and return at 3:10 p.m. daily during the school term.

The fifth and sixth grade pupils from the Lincoln and Roosevelt school area are assigned to Columbus School, Roseto. Buses will leave from these buildings approximately 8:15 a.m. and return about 3:15 p.m. daily.

Pupils who miss the bus are to find their own way to school. Missing the bus is no excuse for being absent, school officials said. Pupils who misbehave on the bus will have to walk to school for one week after each offense, it was announced by John W. Sabatine, elementary supervisor in the Bangor Area School district. He also announced the cafeteria service.

The cafeterias will open on the first day of school, Sept. 9. The cost per meal will be 30 cents to be paid one week in advance. For the first three days pupils are to be prepared to pay for the balance of the week in advance.

Pupils may still bring their own lunch. All lunch boxes and bags must be labeled with the name of the pupil. Milk or additional milk may be purchased at 5 cents.

The milk program for kindergarten pupils, Lincoln pupils, McKinley pupils, and Roosevelt pupils will start on Sept. 14.

Sleeping Sickness

TOKYO (AP) — Sleeping sickness has taken the lives of 100 Japanese in the past few days, bringing the total deaths to 350 this year, says the Health Ministry.

In neighboring South Korea, 34 persons have died since the sleeping sickness epidemic broke out there two weeks ago.

Short Circuit Fire Put Out

DELAWARE WATER GAP—Delaware Water Gap firemen were called to the Hickory Valley Farm Restaurant yesterday at 9:30 a.m. to extinguish a fire, but their services were not required.

William Widdoss, Delaware Water Gap fire chief, said that the fire was caused by a short circuit in a fluorescent light fixture. There was a great deal of smoke, but no actual fire, Widdoss said.

The two trucks and 15 firemen were on the scene about 20 minutes and returned to quarters after an electrician arrived and repaired the fixture.

Just Between Us — —

—By Bobby Westbrook

A lot of children and grandchildren are getting in extra days of swimming at the Glen Brook pool and a lot of husbands are finding excuses to drop by the club to check up on how their wives are doing in the tournament these days.

Meanwhile, back at the clubhouse—all is sweetness and light as everybody goes out of their way to brag up their opponent's game. The funny part is that it's true. Most of them are having some of their better games of the season. How much of it is due to tournament competition and how much to the dry fairways which tend to keep a ball, started in the right direction, right on going, is hard to tell.

While we're on sports, somebody ought to get Fran Shinn and John Wilson to tell about their adventures sailing a 40-foot boat up from the Chesapeake Bay to Atlantic City. While maybe not as epic as Kon-tiki, they did have some moments on a sand bar that might go down in history.

Mrs. Elwood Grant has her own version of sports, which consists of trying to beat the bulldozer to the native plants which they would otherwise be destroyed, and then having them transplanted to Bowman's Hill Wild Flower Preserve. The first rescue mission was in the area to be flooded by Tocks Island. Now she's done it again up at Camelback before the newest ski trail gets started.

At the rate things are developing around here, she should have her work cut out for her in the years to come. The rumors and counter-rumors of big developments of one sort or another are so persistent that you get the feeling we're all going to be gobbled up.

Speaking of gobbling, the Garden Club members turned out in such numbers that they exhausted the refreshments. They also got sort of a shock at the number of tourists funnelling through Camelback lodge for the summer chairlift ride. At the moment, however, the biggest outdoor sport seems to be the visit to the West End Fair. And that, really, as much as Labor Day marks the real end of summer.

Mrs. Carl David Besecker
(Arnold Studio)

Stroudsburg — Miss Virginia Ann LaBar, daughter of Mrs. Gladys I. LaBar, of 113 South Eighth St., Stroudsburg, was married at 2:30 Aug. 8 in the Stroudsburg Methodist Church to Carl David Besecker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Besecker, of Tannersville.

Rev. Roger Stimson and Rev. Joseph Leggieri performed the double-ring ceremony.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Harold E. Seip, the bride wore a dress of peau de soie with a silk bodice with long sleeves and Sabrina neckline and a bell shaped skirt with a back bow and cabbage rose flowing into a pleat from the waistline. She carried a cascade bouquet of white mums and carnations.

Her sister, Mrs. Richard Van Dyne of Garden St., Stroudsburg, was matron of honor. She wore a sheath dress of mauve pink with a bell-shaped overskirt forming a peplum with white accessories, lace gloves and shoes and an ivory flower pin the gift of the bride. She wore a feathered flower hat with a three-tier veil and carried a cascade bouquet of light lavendar mums.

The bridesmaids were Miss Charlene Widmer and Miss Marlene Yutz, both of Stroudsburg. They wore similar dresses in lavendar with ivory rose pin and carried cascades of pink mums.

The flower girl, Miss Vickey Van Dyne, niece of the bride wore a pale pink dress with an empire waistline and carried a basket of pink, white and lavendar mums.

Peter Gerard of Henryville was best man. Ushers were Tom Besecker, cousin of the bridegroom and William Besecker with Paul Warnick, as ring bearer.

The church was decorated with altar vases of gladiolas and fiji mums picking up the colors of the bride's attendants and greens. Mrs. Richard Seip, cousin of the bride, was organist. Mrs. Herbert Yutz, soloist, sang "Because," "I Love Thee," "The Lord's Prayer" and "Wedding Prayer" after communion.

The bride's mother wore a gray and white sheath of waffle jersey with matching jacket, white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. The bridegroom's mother wore an aqua sheath dress of chiffon with a train, matching accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

Hamburger Battle Of Paris Wins Friends For US Basic

By Linda Pipher
Daily Record Home Economist

Stroudsburg — The emotional French were ready to flip when a brave American company recently opened a chain of hamburger stands throughout Paris, France. It was enough fuel to start a war, for the French consider ground meat suitable for dogs, but never, never, for humans.

A virologist at the Pasteur Institute even went so far as to call hamburgers sheer poison, warning Parisians that millions of germs were ground into the meat by chopping machines. The company was almost doomed when one hamburger devotee was courageous enough to say, "Americans eat millions of hamburgers a month, and they seem to be doing fine."

Now the snack bars are doing a booming business and the French are realizing what they've been missing all these years. Whether they will ever consume as many as we do a year is doubtful for we enjoy 20 billion annually, an average of 110 for every man, woman, and child!

Hamburger is the King of Budget Stretchers, and we're always looking for new ways to dress it up. How about adding these good seasonings to the ground meat and then topping it with a luscious cheese-pickle mixture?

Cheese 'n Pickle Burgers

Burgers:
- 1½ pounds ground beef
- ½ cup rolled oats, uncooked
- 1 egg
- ½ cup tomato juice
- 2 tablespoons thinly sliced green onion
- 1 tablespoon Worchestershire sauce
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper

Topping:
- ½ cup chopped sweet or dill pickle or well drained sweet pickle relish
- 2 cups shredded Cheddar cheese
- ¼ cup thinly sliced green onion
- 1 to 2 tablespoons prepared mustard

To make burgers, combine ingredients and mix well. Shape into 8 patties, 3½ inch in diameter. Broil or grill burgers 3 to 4 inches from heat, 8 to 12 minutes, as desired, turning once during cooking. To make topping, combine ingredients and mix well. Spoon atop burgers 2 to 3 minutes before end of cooking time and allow cheese to melt. Yield: 8 servings.

Did you ever try a slice of cheese between two patties? They will certainly make a hit with the youngsters — I guarantee it! These goldmines can be made a day or two ahead and wrapped individually and frozen. If frozen, allow extra time for cooking.

Hamburger Goldmines
- 1 pound ground beef
- 1 egg
- 1 tablespoon milk
- 1 teaspoon salt
- pepper
- 4 slices American cheese
- 1 teaspoon soy sauce
- 4 hamburger buns

Beat egg slightly and combine with milk. Mix with ground beef and seasonings. Make 8 flat patties. Place a slice of cheese on each of 4 patties and cover with 4 remaining patties. Press edges together to seal. Sprinkle each with ¼ teaspoon soy sauce. Place on grill about 4 to 6 inches from charcoal. Broil about 5 minutes on each side. Serve hot in hamburger buns.

The next hamburger patty gets its name from the cream style corn, a favorite of the pioneers, which is mixed in with the beef. Add sour cream, onion and Worcestershire sauce and you'll have a surprise combination that will make a hit with the family. These patties can be served without a bun, but of course, if you have children in the house, you'd better have buns handy!

Pioneer Patties
- 1½ pounds ground beef
- ½ cup dry bread crumbs
- ¼ cup dairy sour cream
- 1 cup cream style corn
- ¼ cup grated onion
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Combine bread crumbs, sour cream, corn, onion, salt, pepper, and Worcestershire sauce and add to meat. Mix thoroughly. Shape into 8 patties about 1 inch thick. Place patties on broiler rack. Insert broiler pan and rack so that top of patties is 2 to 3 inches from heat. Broil on one side until brown, about 10 to 12 minutes. Turn and broil second side until brown, about 6 to 8 minutes. 4 to 6 servings.

It's not a good idea to keep ground meat in refrigerator for more than 1 or 2 days as it is likely to spoil. Freeze the meat if you don't intend to use it right away.

Here's a colorful way to serve hamburger patties — served with a scrumptious sauce heated in the skillet after patties have been panbroiled.

Company Fare Hamburgers
- 1½ pounds ground beef
- 2 medium tomatoes, peeled
- ¼ cup chopped onion
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1 tablespoon lard or drippings
- 1 cup dairy sour cream
- 1 teaspoon dill seed
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley

Scoop out center of tomatoes and combine with beef, onion, 1½ teaspoon salt and pepper. Mix well. Cut remaining tomato into strips and reserve for sour cream sauce. Shape meat mixture into 6 patties about ¾ inch thick. Brown in lard or drippings. Remove patties to a heated platter. Pour off drippings, if necessary. Add sour cream, tomato strips, dill seed and ¼ teaspoon salt. Cook just until heated through. Spoon sauce over patties. Sprinkle with parsely. Yields 6 servings.

Church-Backed Concert Now Summer Tradition

Mount Pocono — The annual summer concerts sponsored by the Mount Pocono Methodist Church and the artists who star in them are becoming traditions in the area. The seventh annual concert will be held Saturday, Aug. 29, at 8:30 p.m. following tradition yet introducing new trends.

For the first time the concert has been moved out of the church. It will be presented in the Pocono Mountain Joint High School Auditorium, Swiftwater.

Joseph Engelhardt, violist and the original organizer of the annual concert, will be a guest. Last year, he was chosen concertmaster of the newly-organized St. Petersburg Philharmonic. Now semi-retired, his musical career has been varied and full of honors. He was musical director at the Chicago studios of CBS from 1933 to 1945, before which he was concertmaster at NBC.

He has been featured on the Kraft Musical Hall, a member of the Bell Telephone Hour and numerous soap operas. He was cited in the President's Music committee in 1960 while musical director at Pocono Manor.

Mitchell Andrews, pianist, is also a charter artist with the Methodist Concert, but he too has had new honors. He recently returned from Vermont where he took part in the Marlboro Festival of Music, and has just completed an appearance on Concerts in Miniature, the TV series shown at the color TV network at the RCA Pavilion at the World's Fair.

Early in October, he will leave for Europe for a six-weeks tour with the Marlboro Trio before returning for a coast to coast tour of the United States.

Jack Irwin, baritone, is making a return appearance for the concert. Co-producer and actor at the Cherry Lane Playhouse, he recently accepted an invitation from Ginger Rogers to appear in "Tovarich" at the Dallas Music Festival.

A surprise musical innovation has also been promised.

Proceeds from the concert will be used for the new educational building.

THE WYCKOFF SHOPPER

It doesn't seem possible to me . . . it never does . . . that summer suddenly goes Voom and vanishes in a wave of sweat and simmer. But that's just about what is happening now. Out of a clear sky (and so many times the sky has been wonderously clear this year) one's daughter remarks, "You know, I haven't a thing to wear back to school" . . . and visitors to the store say, "It will soon be Labor Day and then, it's all over for another year."

One of the things my daughter and I did was to invest in a few of the sale items that were included in this past Monday's list of Money Savers. Stockings were on sale, for instance. So was foundation wear. And in our accessories department for just 1.00 we found a cute little triangle of bright red plastic that is just the thing for her to wear on stormy days with her black and white raincoat.

How many of you make it a habit to read the Wyckoff ads each day? You really should . . . for it's surprising how frequently Wyckoff's will "spring" a wonderful, dollar-saving surprise. The Monday Money Savers are a guarantee of this . . . and there are nine each week. Everyone naturally looks for the Friday and Saturday Whizzer . . . everyone, that is, who is interested in saving wherever it is possible to do so.

As I type, Miss Fumi Komatsu and Marcia Clapp DeRocco are busy hanging the 24 wood block prints that constitute Fumi's one man show here in our Wyckoff Keystone Room. They are charming . . . and so is the artist. In fact, she is so dainty and adorable, I cannot write "one man" show without chuckling. Yet, I suppose it would not be nearly as professional to say "one woman" show.

There are perhaps one or two of the prints that do not reveal the artist's Oriental origin . . . but most of them can readily be recognized as the work of a very skillful and imaginative Japanese. The delicacy and grace so characteristic of the Japanese artist creep into even the most forceful of her works, and add a touch of whimsicality that is pure delight. I love her studies of the cat, lazy and satisfied, dreaming of birds and the Jananese angels. Her day lilies are beautiful, and there is a feeling of peace and love in "Mrs. Turn's Back Yard," the study of a mother horse, her colt, and a cluster of kittens. Not only are Fumi's prints beautiful . . . their titles are unusual. "Kissing," for instance, shows a black butterfly hovering above a shocking pink flower.

Do see the Keystone Room show. You'll enjoy it, I'm sure. And plan to be our guest at tea Friday afternoon when Fumi, wearing her native costume, will receive the public and answer questions. She will again be in the Keystone Room Friday night from 7 to 8. Any prints sold will benefit the building fund of the Pocono Art Center.

Fumi will show one of the wooden blocks from which a print was made, the tools with which she works, and explain the process. She tells me she never prints more than five of a kind, and the originals are signed. As skilled in this as in this other media, she has completed eight oils while here this summer to be included in a one man show at the Phoenix Art Museum, opening December 11th.

The mail brings a delightful note from warm-hearted Ellie Smith, who is returning to Washington, D.C. after a busy summer as public relations director for Cherry Lane Playhouse. Ellie plans to be back weekends only until the season ends . . . but we'll miss her after that, as we will miss the entire group of excellent, likeable actors and actresses. The final show is "South Pacific" and I can hardly wait to see and hear it. A terrific cast, a terrific show, with terrific music. A terrific windup for a memorable season.

Browns Ask Waivers On Bill Schoonover

By KEN O'BRIEN
Daily Record Sports Editor

HIRAM, Ohio — the Cleveland Browns yesterday asked waivers on Bill Schoonover, former Stroud Union and Syracuse University grid flash.

The 5-11, 200-pound backfield agent lasted until the start of player-limit cuts.

Only last Thursday, Bill (Dub) Jones, offensive backfield coach of the Browns, said "Schoonie" was "still in contention."

Although Jones threw a heap of praises upon Bill in a telephone conversation with The Daily Record, he also noted that Schoonover's size and speed did not quite measure up to pro standards.

"He's not as big and he's not quite as fast as most of the pros go," was Jones' summation. "But he certainly makes up for this in his determination," he added.

free Agent

Schoonover was signed as a free agent by the Browns after winning three letters at left half and fullback for Syracuse.

By being placed on waivers, Bill still has a chance of being picked up by any other club in the National Football League. If he is waived out of the league, teams in the American Football League will be able to sign him. Another possibility is the Canadian Football League.

When told of the news yesterday, his father, William, said, "I don't know what he'll do . . . The future is up to him. I really couldn't hazard a guess right now what will happen or what he'll do."

Back To School?

His father mentioned that perhaps Bill may return to Syracuse to finish one more semester for a bachelor's degree. "But if he got an offer from another club, he probably would take it," he opined.

There was little remorse in the father's voice. "You have to face things square in the eye," he philosophized. "The Browns have a helluva ballclub this year . . . They're blessed with a lot of fine backs and I don't think the other clubs are in quite that good a position, so it's quite possible he may be picked up by another team either in the National Football League or the American Football League.

"At least he lasted this far and that's certainly a good indication that he showed them (the Browns) something while he was there."

MacPhail's Choice

Picks Milton Eisenhower To Succeed Ford Frick

BELAIR, Md. (AP) — Larry MacPhail, who helped seat A.B. (Happy) Chandler as baseball commissioner nearly 20 years ago, has a personal choice for the sport's No. 1 man to succeed Ford Frick.

He is Milton Stover Eisenhower, president of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore and younger brother of former President of the United States Dwight D. Eisenhower.

"The Right Man"

"The next commissioner absolutely must be a man of national prominence and an executive," said MacPhail. "We have just that kind of man here in Maryland.

"I don't know whether Dr. Eisenhower even would consider it, but I believe he would make an outstanding commissioner. He is a great educator, a great friend of baseball and a man who has the capacity of expressing exactly what he means.

"It is imperative that the next commissioner have the complete confidence of the American public. Who could fit that description better than the man who has had the confidence of several of our presidents, to whom he has been both advisor and friend?"

Rabid Sports Fan

This is t e first time Milton Eisenhower, who at 64 is nine years younger than his illustrious brother, has ever been mentioned in a baseball capacity although he is known to be a rabid sports fan.

As president of Kansas State and later Penn State, he was a vociferous spectator at football and basketball games. He also has attended numerous baseball games at Baltimore's Municipal Stadium this season.

Frick, whose term expires a year from September, announced his retirement intentions several weeks ago.

Joe Cronin, president of the American League, is regarded as the top candidate to succeed the 69-year-old Frick. Cronin is 56.

Judge Robert Cannon of Milwaukee, 47-year-old players' attorney, also is regarded highly by major league club owners.

Tribe Tops Orioles

BALTIMORE (AP) — Bob Chance and Leon Wagner smacked back-to-back homers to climax a five-run Cleveland rally in the eighth inning as the Indians again whacked the American League-leading Baltimore Orioles 5-3 Tuesday night.

The Indians, only club with a season edge over Baltimore, were blanked on three hits through the first seven innings by Oriole starter Milt Pappas.

But pinch hitter Tito Francona hit the first pitch in the eighth for a double. When Pappas, who struck out nine, issued his first walk, to Woody Held, he was replaced by Harvey Haddix.

A pinch single by Max Alvis scored one run and another single by Chico Salmon loaded the bases. The second Cleveland run scored as Dick Howsser, who had three previous hits, grounded into a double play.

Chance then socked a two-run homer, giving the Indians a 4-3 lead, and Wagner followed with his 29th circuit. Four of Chance's 13 homers have been hit against Baltimore.

Lords Valley CC Breaks Ground For Second Nine

HAWLEY — Groundbreaking ceremonies celebrating the start of the second nine holes of the golf course at Lords Valley Country Club were held during the weekend.

Art Wall, internationally prominent golf pro who operates from Pocono Manor, was among the celebrities taking part.

Wall, who has been hampered by a severely pinched nerve in the neck, staged a brilliant Caribbean tour earlier this year on his way to what appeared one of his most successful tourney swings.

Ron Bakich, Lords Valley golf pro, welcomed the guests.

Newest Development

A membership club located at Hemlock Farms, Lords Valley is the Poconos' newest and most complete lakeside vacation development.

The club opened a little more than a year ago at the country estate of William Brewster. The club consists of a stately main house, a game house, a boathouse on Hemlock Lake, two all - weather tennis courts, a swimming pool and a stable and paddock complex along with the original nine-hole golf course which was built before World War II.

Sporty Layout

One of the sportiest layouts in the area, the course stretches around the shore of Hemlock Lake.

Expansion of the course is under the supervision of Norman H. Woods, noted golf course architect of Vancouver, British Columbia.

The 18-hole course, when completed next year, will cover more than 6,600 yards.

Woods said the second nine-hole layout will incorporate all the latest and most unique methods of providing hazards and challenges for the 'scratch' golfer, but also providing fun and breathtaking views for those not yet quite so proficient."

Homesite plots of one - third to one - half acre in size will be laid out around and between the new fairways. The lots are being developed by Western Heritage Properties, Ltd., owners of Hemlock Farms on whose property the Lords Valley CC is located, and from whom Lords Valley leases its land and facilities.

Among the club members who attended the groundbreaking ceremonies were Thomas Hanney, president of Hanney Fuel Co., Brooklyn, N.Y.; Benjamin Rawlins of Hawley, vice president of U.S. Steel; Leonard Sherman of Hawley, president of Sherman Mills; C. E. Conover of Hemlock Farms, president of Conover Industries Corp., and Thomas O'Rourke of Upper Saddle River, N.J.

Two Golf Veterans Vie For GB Title

STROUDSBURG — The championship of Glen Brook Country Club's Women's Golf Assn. yesterday narrowed down to two veterans of the course as Vi Shafer, former champion, won out over Helen Haynes, and Peg Cramer, many times a runner-up for the championship, defeated Henri Baldwin.

Mrs. Shafer battled back from seeming defeat when Mrs. Haynes had her three-down on the 14th hole. However, she took the next three holes and went on to win the match on the 18th green. The Cramer-Baldwin match was also a close one, ending only on the 17th green, as both women toured the course in the 90's.

Mrs. Shafer and Mrs. Cramer will meet in the finals on Thursday morning beginning at 9 a.m. with the tournament luncheon to follow for all Women's Golf Assn. members.

The first flight finals will match Oriole Nitrauer against Shirley Christman. Mrs. Nitrauer yesterday won over Bess Trumbauer and Mrs. Christman defeated Joan Brown.

In the second flight Alverna Melick lost to Bobby Westbrook, who will meet Elaine Martin in the finals.

The nine-hole tournament is still in its semi-final stage to be played today. Betty McCambridge, who gained a win over Lynne Saxton, will meet Kay Dann, who defeated Lillian Nietsch. Mary Jane McCluskey who won her match with Audrey Wyckoff will be meeting Gertrude Somers who defeated Nora Meyung.

Glynn Griffing Dropped As QB

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) — New York's Giants of the National Football League disposed of three of their meager supply of ball carriers and added another defensive halfback and a pass catching end to their huge supply in those departments Tuesday during a wholesale shakeup of talent.

The Giants, winners of the Eastern title for the past three years, also dropped Glynn Griffing, heir apparent to Y.A. Tittle's quarterbacking job for the past two seasons and reinstated Andy Robestelli, veteran defensive end who retired last fall, as player-coach.

King Gone

Gone from the roster are Phil King, the club's leading ground-gainer last year who went to Pittsburgh for a high draft choice; Joe Don Looney, the Oklahoma bruiser who appeared the team's answer to its search for a big running back; and Hugh McElhenny, a onetime NFL great as a runner who now is 36. McElhenny was given his outright release.

Looney, No. 1 draft choice of the Giants last winter although he was suspended by Oklahoma for morale reasons in the last half of the college campaign, was swapped to Baltimore for Andy Nelson, defensive halfback, and R.C. Owens, pass catching end.

Goes With Looney

Lou Kirouac, a tackle from Boston College, and a high 1964 draft choice accompanied Looney. The Oklahoman hadn't gotten into the line-up in the Giants' three exhibitions, all defeats, this season.

The team now is so well stocked with pass catching ends that Joe Walton, regular tight end last season, now is no better than third string. The club also has back all five of the defensive halfbacks and safeties with which it won the divisional title last year.

Other Deals?

There was no comment from Giant officials when asked if the supply of pass catchers and defensive halfbacks might lead to other deals.

"Joe Morrison goes back into the backfield," said Coach Allie Sherman. Morrison, the team's back-of-all trades, had been used extensively as a flanker until last week.

The departure of Griffing, whom the Giants drafted in 1962 when he still had a year of eligibility at Mississippi, apparently means that Gary Wood, picked on the eighth round last winter for his defensive ability, may inherit the No. 2 spot behind Tittle. Henry Schichtle of Wichita also is quarterback.

Both Schichtle and Wood, who played at Cornell, are rookies.

The Giants cut their roster to the required 45 by putting Ed Adamchik, former Pittsburgh lineman, on the disabled list for the entire year and giving outright released to Millard Fleming, defensive halfback from Marshall; Bill Pashe, a defensive halfback from George Washington; Frank Lasky, a tackle from Florida; Louis Guy, flanker from Mississippi; and Tom Costello, a linebacker from Dayton.

Yankees Defeat Senators

NEW YORK (AP) — Mickey Mantle ripped a two-run eighth inning double into right field Tuesday night, provided roommate Whitey Ford with his first victory in over a month and pointed the New York Yankees to a hard-earned 4-1 triumph over the Washington Senators.

Ford, the Yankees' pitching coach and pitching ace, who has been hobbled with a hip ailment, left the game for pinch hitter Hector Lopez, who started the Yanks' winning rally with a lead-off walk in the eighth.

Tony Kubek followed with a double that chased loser Claude Osteen. Roger Maris drew a one-out walk and Mantle followed with the line shot to right off Ron Kline, scoring two.

After a walk to Elston Howard, Joe Pepitone singled for two more runs, more than enough to provide Ford — who rooms with Mantle on Yankee road trips—with his 13th victory, his first since July 15. Al Downing mopped up for Ford in the ninth striking out the side.

A. JOHNSON

DEAR MR. JOHNSON:
A forthright display of appreciation should not provoke laughter, but if it does, enjoy it. Winners can afford laughs. Newspaper advertising has long been a vehicle for offering appreciation and thanks to wives, husbands, saints . . . and average Americans.
Recently Eliezer Goldfarb, 77, an actor who now attends a Broadway stage door, ran a display ad in the "New York Times" which cost him $996.60. He requested his name be deleted, but was told it would be against the newspaper's policy.
Here is an excerpt from Mr. Goldfarb's ad: "THANKS. Every morning when I get out of bed, I arise with a feeling of being Glad . . . Opportunities aplenty. One can have the best. All I need is know-how and the means to pass the test." Run the ad, Mr. Johnson.

As with Mr. Goldfarb, it could be a high point in your life.
CY

DEAR CY:
My employer has a group life insurance plan, which has been going for 8 years. The coverage doesn't seem high enough to me and I am wondering if these plans are ever increased to give employees more protection.
D. WALL

DEAR D.:
Group life insurance purchased last year showed a 17 per cent increase over 1962. About 25 per cent of the $18 billion in group insurance issued during 1963 was to increase protection for workers already insured under a group life plan.
These plans usually insure workers for what amounts to a full year's earnings, although in some industries the protection is greater. According to the Institute of Life Insurance, "The average group certificate in force last year provided $4,490 of life insurance."
CY

DEAR CY:
The company where I work used to pay us in cash, but now we get checks. Checks are supposed to save the company 15 minutes of lost time per employee per week, but they cost me money.
You'd think someone would figure out ways for checks to be cashed without the employe having to pay for it.
MRS. BLANZ

DEAR MRS. BLANZ:
Paying employes by check has increased enormously and even Britain lifted its century old check ban last year. Some states, however, have laws which require checks be issued by companies only when they can be cashed without difficulty.
Nathan Stone, an enterprising New Yorker, recently started the Outside Paymaster Plan. Company employes cash payroll checks at any office under OPP's auspices and incur no cost.
At month's end the organization bills firms a service charge based on the number of checks its employes cashed. You can expect to see more new services like this.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCIS DRAKE

Wednesday, August 26.
March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — Focus on essentials and the benefits immediately available but, at the same time, plan for greater and better achievement in the future. Do not overtax yourself, however.
April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) — The right start will be important now. Disturbing factors may tend to upset you and your routine. Don't let them. Keep your eyes focused on worthwhile goals and keep plugging ahead.
May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) — Chart your course carefully, not leaving out details which could later prove more important than you think. If you need advice, seek it from experts. Don't take anyone's say-so.
June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — Better planetary influences than for many others. You can make good headway in familiar matters, but don't trip yourself up by being too hasty. Keep your mind open to the viewpoints and tactics of others, but do not necessarily follow in their wake.
July 24 to August 23 (Leo) — A day for making improvements all along the line. You may face some controversy, but listen carefully: it could prove more enlightening than annoying. Maintain your dignity and forbearance.
August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — In all situations, study the angles carefully before voicing your opinions. Being reasonable and gracious in persuasion will result in enthusiastic support for your ideas.
September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — Be careful of your manner and approach now. If unmindful, you could be misjudged, lose out on getting the cooperation of others.
October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Your highest goals may not be as remote as you think. You can accomplish far more than you may imagine; surely get a better footing on the success ladder.
November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — You can run an efficient, flexible program, geared to even unexpected situations, if you keep your normally logical mind well-ordered and free of irrelevant things. Avoid excitability, extremism.
December 23 to January 20 (Capricorn) — If in a rut or in the doldrums, pull yourself out, pronto. Some projects require a lot of patience and perseverance to succeed, so don't feel, instead, try a new tack, a new method to speed things along.
January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) — A good day for calling meetings to iron out misunderstandings, for devising new methods, capitalizing on unusual ideas. Take possible delays in stride.
February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) — Do not let the "gift of gab" mislead you, or depend upon high-sounding promises. Study persons and situations with your usual keen perception. Then act as your best judgment dictates.
YOU BORN TODAY like the "good life" are extremely energetic and willing to work hard for the things you want. You are independent, generous with your time on the behalf of others, but are sometimes too technical about their errors. You can recoup losses quickly and, if necessary, try new ways to achieve your ends, though, normally, you strive to hold on avidly to what you have. You are sensitive to others' likes and dislikes; therefore make an ideal companion. You could win great success as a stylist, designer, fashion promoter, public speaker, politician, chemist or nurse.

Washington Report

Humphrey, McCarthy Have Similar Records

By Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON (CQ) — As far as actual voting records and stands on issues are concerned, Minnesota's Senators Hubert H. Humphrey and Eugene McCarthy — both contenders for the Democratic Vice Presidential nomination — are as alike as tweedle-dum and tweedle-dee.

But in their personalities, the way they have conducted themselves in Congress and the way they probably would act as Vice President or President one day, the two men are worlds apart.

Voting Records

In 1963, Humphrey and McCarthy disagreed on only 3 percent of the Senate roll-calls — making them the "most agreeing" pair of same-state Senators in the country. Their voting records in previous years were similarly parallel.

Based on their actual Senate votes, pressure groups also rate the two men alike. In 1961-62, for instance, Humphrey and McCarthy each received a 100 percent score from Americans for Democratic Action and the National Farmers Union. The AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education (COPE) gave Humphrey a 100 percent score and McCarthy an 82 percent "right" rating.

Three conservative organizations, including Americans for Constitutional Action and the American Farm Bureau Federation, gave both men a flat zero percent rating.

Detailed examination of voting records shows that on virtually every issue — from economic policy to civil rights, from labor and agriculture to foreign aid — Humphrey and McCarthy cast virtually identical votes, all in the familiar liberal-internationalist Northern Democratic mode.

The few significant votes on which the men have differed include tax matters, with McCarthy voting occasionally to maintain the 27½ percent oil depletion allowance while Humphrey has consistently backed a reduction.

The only major foreign affairs vote on which they split was a 1961 amendment by Sen. Barry Goldwater (R Ariz.) to strip the proposed U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency of its research powers. Humphrey, the original proposer of a "peace" agency, voted against the weakening amendment while McCarthy voted for it.

Thus for real differences between Humphrey and McCarthy the observer must turn to analysis of their legislative "output" and their personalities. Here the two Senators, old political allies in the Minnesota Democratic Farmer-Labor Party, could scarcely be more different.

Since he entered the Senate in 1949, Humphrey has demonstrated a lively interest in virtually every legislative subject imaginable.

Florida, Freezing Kayo Canning

GILBERT — Farm families who go south with the birds, and home freezing, have cut heavily into the home canning exhibits at the West End Fair.

Canned fruits, vegetables, jellies and preserves no longer cram the shelves of division nine.

In 1962, for instance, there were 100 exhibits in this division—when the fair started in the days before frozen vegetables and swift travel, home canning and "putting up" was a mainstay of the American dinner table.

4-H Horse And Pony Show Today At 1 P.M.

GILBERT — Members of the three Monroe County 4-H horse and pony clubs are hopefully eyeing trophies and ribbons to be awarded at their horse show at the 43rd annual West End Fair. The clubs are Bartonsville, Stroudsburg and West End.

The annual show is one of the top features of the fair. It will be held Wednesday, Aug. 26 at 1 p.m.

The ringmaster will be Carl Davidson and the judge will be William Wagman of Red Lion, Pa.

Rules

General rules:

Entries in this show shall be limited to boys and girls who are members of the Monroe County 4-H Horse and Pony Clubs, under the supervision of county agents.

Classes wil be conducted according to the 1964 state 4-H Horse Show rules and regulations.

A trophy and six ribbons will be awarded for each class.

Classes

Classes are: grooming and showmanship for beginners; junior western pleasure; apple bobbing, time event; senior western pleasure; pole bending, time event; English pleasure; ride a buck; hunter hack; clover leaf barrel race; junior hunter seat equitation over jumps; senior hunter seat equitation over jumps; egg race; wheelbarrow race; junior stock seat equitation; senior stock seat equitation; and consolation class.

Top contenders for honors are: Larry Wolbert, Margie Walters, Heather Henry; Susan Jarret, Sandy Vaughn, Donna Marsh, Jane Schoenenberger, Susan McCool, Katrina Kresge, and Donald Switzgable.

Of course these are only a few. Any member of a county 4-H Horse and Pony Club is capable of walking off with a top award.

4-H MEMBERS — Annie (left) and Susie (right) McCool, aged 11 and 12 respectively, are veteran horsewomen. Both had their own ponies by the age of 2, and have been taking riding lssons for four years. The two youngsters, members of the Monroe County 4-H Horse and Poney Club in Bartonsville, are consistent placers in the club's horse shows. Behind are some of their awards. (Photo by McNett)

Storms Pleads Not Guilty

SAYLORSBURG — Carl E. Storms, 60, of Stroudsburg, RD 5, has been released under $500 bail to await Monroe County Criminal Court action on a motor vehicle code violation charge.

Storms pleaded not guilty recently at a hearing before Richard A. Snyder of Snydersville, Justice of the Peace, but the squire ruled the commonwealth had proved a prima facie case.

State Police at Stroudsburg said Storm's car forced a car driven by Martin A. Altemose, 27, of Portland, into a ditch Tuesday night near Snydersville.

McCool Girls Top Riders

HENRYVILLE—Slated as top contenders in the junior division when the 4-H Club Horse and Poney Show gets underway today at the West End Fair are Susie, 12, and Annie, 11, McCool of Henryville.

The two girls, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Tom McCool, have been riding since they got their first ponies at age 2. They've been taking riding lessons for about four years, and consistently pull down prizes at 4-H shows. They've got a wall full of ribbons.

When the two were 3 or 4, they gave shooting exhibitions at the rifle range operated by their father, who is a gunsmith. Susie said she still shoots her .45 automatic in exhibitions.

Sports come naturally to the whole family. The girls' father and brother, Terry, are at the National Rifle Assn. national matches at Camp Perry, Ohio. The duo are taking courses to become NRA marksmanship instructors.

Susie, a 7th grade student, is secretary of the Bartonsville 4-H club, and has been a member for a little more than two years. Annie, in the sixth grade, joined a year later.

Both girls say they like 4-H activities very much, while Susie has branched out. She said she's now taking flying lessons at Hamlen's airport.

The girls are loking forward to the horse show at the West End Fair. They may have a slight problem, however. Annie's horse, Jack, got loose recently and managed to gulp down 25 pounds of feed before he was discovered. The young horsewoman hopes he will be able to go into the show ring by the time of the fair, if not it will be one of the few they have ever missed.

Range Care Hints

GILBERT—Hints for West End cattle exhibitors include ideas on range care.

The range, particularly ladino clover and bluegrass, should be clipped several times a season to keep the forage in a tasty, vetgetative condition.

Clipping helps keep unpalatable seed heads from forming.

Poultry Houses

GILBERT—West End Fair regulars say that windowless poultry houses with controlled environment are an aid to poultry raisers.

This type of construction eleminates costly window repairs, and provides more complete control of ventilation and lighting.

F. F. A. Active

GILBERT — Many of the top agriculture exhibits at the West End Fair will be entered by members of Pleasant Valley High School's chapter of the Future Farmers of America.

This was reported by Clifford Stroud, vocational agriculture supervisor at the school.

Stroud said at one time there were FFA chapters at Stroudsburg, East Stroudsburg, Tannersville, Chestnuthill and Polk. Stroudsburg, East Stroudsburg and Tannersville dropped the chapters and the Chestnuthill and Polk chapters combined to form the Pleasant Valley chapter, according to Stroud.

He said the Pleasant Valley chapter is named Pohopoco. Stroud said the Chestnuthill and Polk chapters were started in 1935, which was really the beginning of the present chapter. He said the chapter now has from 35 to 40 boys a year.

Go To College

Stroud stated many vocational agriculture boys have been going on to college in recent years. Their opportunities in the agricultural field is tremendous after college, he said.

Stroud reported many of the boys in Pleasant Valley's vocational agriculture classes are from farms operated only part-time. These boys usually plan on farming only part-time, he said.

Stroud said Pleasant Valley uses one of the newer systems of teaching vocational agriculture. It is known as the cross-section system, which gives the students a varied range of agriculture subjects, he said.

Stroud said this was the best method of teaching agriculture in the West End due to the fact that the area is mostly general farming, with not just one speciality.

Stroud reported the Pohopoco chapter of the FFA has done very well for its size. This year, for example, Larry Altemose won the American Farmer Degree, which is the highest degree in the FFA. Larry was the third from the Pleasant Valley chapter to make this degree. Some schools in the state have never had an American Farmer, as only one boy in a thousand is chosen, Stroud stated.

Fair Midways Fun For All

GILBERT—As American as the plastic geranium—as folksy as black-eyed peas in milk gravy—that's the kind of typical rural fair that's held in Gilbert each year.

The West End Fair, as this particular potpourri of cotton candy and brood sows is called, has been going on for 43 years.

It could be almost any fair in the country. The visitor first sees the farm machinery, painted red and yellow and surrounded by admiring farmers.

But the kids of the rural areas ride their father's Farmall all year round—and they run to see the midway.

Ostensibly the blue ribbon awards and the canned goods, the livestock judging and the farm machinery are the mainstays of the fair. The kids know different.

Two Boys Raise Birds For State

GILBERT — Two vocational agriculture students at Pleasant Valley Joint High School have an interesting sideline, according to Clifford Stroud, their instructor.

The pair, James Shafer of Brodheadsville and Robert Getz of Kunkletown, RD 1, raise pheasants for the State Game Commission, he reported.

Stroud said that the boys supplied 500 pheasants apiece to the agency each year.

Mid-August is blossom time for ragweed. Each weed releases millions of irritating pollen grains into the air.

County Extension Agents Selected Fair Judges

GILBERT—Names of judges for exhibits of Monroe County residents at the 43rd annual West End Fair have been released by John Withrow, Monroe County agricultural extension agent.

Withrow, who is the leader of 4-H Clubs in the county, said in all cases the decision of the judges is final.

The home economics exhibits will be judged Tuesday by Mrs. Martha Chapman Wayne, extension home economist for Wayne County; Mrs. Rachel Hoffmeier, extension home economist for Carbon County; and Miss Joan Whiten, extension home economist for Northampton County.

The livestock exhibits were judged Wednesday by C. I. Robertson, agricultural extension agent for Schuylkill County.

Crops and fruit exhibits were judged Tuesday by Ray W. Reitz, agricultural extension agent for Carbon County.

Vegetable exhibits were judged Tuesday by A. T. Skala, agricultural extension agent for Luzerne County.

Polk Roads Set For Blacktopping

KRESGEVILE — The Polk Twp. Road Supervisors announced recently that several of the rural township roads are being prepared for blacktopping.

It was pointed out that this blacktopping is an annual job on the township roads so that residents living off the main highways will have hard-surfaced roads leading to their houses.
